

All MVPD records have an "Entitlements" tab. When the user first goes on the "Entitlements" page, all of the platforms and entitlements are pre-selected by default to reduce the number of clicks.

User will first select from the toggle whether he wants to work on "Stage" or "Production." Selections saved on one instance will not affect selections on the other. Right now, he is working on the "Stage" instance.

After selecting the instance (Stage or Production), the user can select platforms to work on. He can select one platform to work on one at a time, or multiple platforms if entitlement selections are the same across.

The user can de-select platforms they are not working on by clicking on the platform boxes. Platforms not being worked on will be greyed out.

Selected platforms are a dark blue to indicate the user is working on them.

Selected entitlements are a light blue with a sky blue outline.

Any brands that have no logos will show text.

If user selects more than one platform that have different saved brand entitlements, the conflictive brands will be shown in a split state.

For example, Desktop and Amazon TV have the following brands in common: CNBC, E, Esquire, Golf, MSNBC, Mum2, NBC Entertainment, NBC News, NBC Sports, Oxygen, Sprout, Telemundo, and USA. However, Amazon TV does not have "Bravo" and "syfy." Thus, they appear in a split state.

If the user wants to de-whitelist all entitlements, they can uncheck the whitelist checkbox.
Afterwards, they can hit "Save" at the bottom after checking the checkbox. This will ensure that the entitlements will be de-whitelisted and unpublished in 24 hours.

After the user de-whitelists the entitlements and essentially decommissions the MVPD record, he can click "Transfer to New" in order to open up a new MVPD record with information carried over from the old MVPD (logos, entitlements, and display name).

In the new MVPD, entitlement selections will be transferred. However, the whitelist checkbox will not be checked on both instances, "Stage" and "Production."
